Pour and Pencil

Bradford Athey

Throughout his life, music, art, and building things have been steady sources of inspiration for Bradford Athey’s creative work. Rather than choosing one discipline above the others, he has continued to pursue all three.

Although formally trained in music and two-dimensional art, Athey’s primary career is being an architect. More than four decades after his time in the art studios and music practice rooms at UMKC, he returned to art in 2012 following a ten-year hiatus. Earlier in his career, Athey worked with watercolor, oils, and pen; his recent work is primarily created with Prismacolor pencil.

His abstract, surreal images - many of which are inspired by music both sonically and lyrically - is a natural pairing resulting in pictures of sound. The QR code links to a Spotify playlist featuring songs that inspired many of the drawings shown here today, along with selections of Athey’s original music.

Writers are often encouraged to “write what you know.” In a similar spirit, Athey is drawn to the idea of “drawing what he hears” and looks forward to seeing where that ongoing journey leads.

Noah Ennis

Noah Ennis is an abstract pour artist from Union, Missouri, who has been creating unique acrylic pour paintings since 2018. What began as a creative activity with friends during high school quickly grew into a lifelong passion. Since then, his work has reached collectors across the United States, creating opportunities he never imagined.

Entirely self-taught, Noah has no formal training in painting. His artistic process is driven by experimentation and creativity, resulting in one-of-a-kind pieces that can never be exactly replicated. Each painting is created by developing unique techniques using everyday household items, including hairdryers, combs, colanders, yarn, cups, toothpicks, paper towels, cake spinners, and many other unconventional tools.
